[illegible] by most physicians, impotently assailed by all, [illegible] the popular treatment of this terrible disease by remedies within the reach of all passed into hands at once competent and trustworthy. The new and hitherto untried method adopted by Dr. Sanford in the preparation of his RADICAL CURE has won the hearty approval of thousands. It is instantaneous in affording relief in all head colds, sneezing, snuffling and obstructed breathing, and rapidly removes the most oppressive symptoms, clearing the head, [illegible] the breath, restoring the senses of smell, taste and hearing, and neutralizing the constitutional tendency of the disease towards the lungs, liver and kidneys.

More News and Gossip About the President's Marriage.

CLEVELAND NOW IN NEW YORK

Maxwell Breaks Down, Becoming Reticent and Despondent—A Great Scheme by Huntington—Decoration Day in the South.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—There was [illegible] White house yesterday [illegible] almost wholly [illegible] preparations for the president's marriage [illegible] callers [illegible] limited to [illegible] the programme for the ceremony [illegible]

[illegible]

THE PRESIDENT IN RETIREMENT.

There are comparatively few visitors to the White house [illegible] the president's intended marriage [illegible] Senators [illegible] Representatives Collins, Randall, McKenna [illegible] and Secretary Endicott. Senator [illegible] Miss Head, a young lady from [illegible] and President Cleveland remarked [illegible] from the Pacific coast to Washington [illegible] the president would enjoy and the [illegible] California with his bride. [illegible]

[illegible]

Secretary and Mrs. Whitney left Washington yesterday for New York and it is thought they will return either Tuesday evening or Wednesday morning with Miss Folsom, who will be the guest of Mrs. Whitney during the short interval between her arrival and the hour of the wedding. Secretary Whitney said however that he did not know just when he would return from New York and that he was not aware of the arrangements by which he is to accompany Miss Folsom to Washington.

MISS FOLSOM.

NEW YORK, May 30.—Miss Folsom kept very secluded in the Gilsey house yesterday. She saw very few friends, but took a short drive with her mother and did some shopping. The hotel is besieged by people anxious to see the president's intended. Secretary Whitney is already here and the president will be [illegible]

Breakfast was served to-day in the Folsom suite of rooms at the Gilsey house at [illegible] After breakfast Mr. Benjamin Folsom said his cousin had entirely recovered from the fatigue of her voyage. It had been announced that Miss Folsom would attend service at Dr. [illegible] church, but she remained indoors. [illegible] Sheridan called and was received. Miss Folsom will witness the Decoration Day parade from a private house. She will accompany the naval squadron up the Hudson to Riverside in the afternoon in a revenue cutter.

NEW YORK, May 30.—Miss Folsom spent the entire day to-day in her apartments at the Gilsey house. She was scarcely through breakfast when the church bells began to ring and it became evident that she was not going to attend divine service anywhere. Excuse given for the non-performance of this religious duty were a desire to avoid public notice and the restraint placed upon her by the death of her grandfather. The Folsoms had an early luncheon and dined at [illegible] The ladies read the paper and occupied themselves attending to correspondence. A portion of this pleasant duty was by telegraph. Miss Folsom received several messages from Secretary Whitney's house at Fifty-seventh street and Fifth avenue. There were more visitors during the day than on the previous day, but all visitors came and went through private entrance and exits without leaving their cards. They were all ladies. Any quantity of flowers found their way to Miss Folsom's room during the morning. Another large box arrived from Washington in the morning, containing some choice flowers from the White house conservatory. As the churches finished their services great throngs of people passed along Twenty-ninth street and looked up at the windows of Miss Folsom's apartments in the hope of catching a glimpse of her. Few of them were rewarded for their pains.

THE PRESIDENTIAL PARTY.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—The president, accompanied by Secretary Lamar, Postmaster-General and Mrs. Vilas, Mrs. Endicott and Mr. Lamont, left for New York this afternoon. The party occupied a special car attached to the regular [illegible] train, which is due in New York to-night at 10:37.

NEW YORK, May 30.—President Cleveland and party arrived here at 10:35 o'clock to-night. Secretary Whitney, Police Superintendent Murray and Police Inspector Byrnes awaited the president, and Benjamin Folsom waited unknown and unnoticed until Cleveland recognized him upon his arrival. One of the throng present cried out to Cleveland as he descended, "Good for you, Grover." The party entered carriages and having crossed the river the president, Secretary and Mrs. Endicott and Secretary Lamar proceeded to Secretary Whitney's home. The postmaster-general and Mrs. Vilas and their son went to the Fifth avenue hotel. Dan Lamont called at the Gilsey house to tell that Cleveland had arrived safely. It is thought that Cleveland will call upon Miss Folsom early in the morning.

EASTERN NEWS ITEMS.

MAXWELL BREAKS DOWN.

ST. LOUIS, May 30.—The Maxwell trial will be resumed to-morrow, notwithstanding it will be a holiday. Maxwell is very much broken down and sleeps but very little. He had three firm friends in jail prior to the trial, but these men will not now speak to him, and he seems to feel that everybody has abandoned him to his fate. His vanity has been entirely destroyed. That was what chiefly sustained him, and it has nothing left to buoy him up. His manner has completely changed. From being loquacious he has become gloomy and uncommunicative, and for the first time since the commencement of his trial he refuses to talk with reporters and refers them to his attorneys. When asked to-day about the bell boy who cut a mysterious figure at the coroner's inquest, but of whom no information could be obtained either by the coroner or by the chief of police, although he was known to have been in Maxwell's room on the day of the murder, he refused to talk and referred his questioners to his lawyers.

The jurors had free movement to-day through all the rooms and were allowed to look at the morning papers, but were not permitted to read anything about the trial. They then turned to baseball and discussed the players' averages for a while and were subsequently taken out to the parks for a walk.

Physicians who recently examined Preller's body to ascertain whether he had the disease described by Maxwell will testify to-morrow in rebuttal. There has been some talk of introducing the organ taken from the body by these physicians in evidence, but it seems to have been left to the prosecution to do so except under order of the court.

A GREAT SCHEME BY HUNTINGTON.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 30.—A special to the Examiner from Washington says: A Sunday paper announces that C. P. Huntington had a little bill slipped through both houses last week allowing him to build a bridge and lay tracks between Covington and Cincinnati. It gave him connection with St. Louis and Chicago that had been wanting for years, and he can now put wheat in ships at Newport News for twenty cents a bushel less than any other road can lay it down at the seaboard. The Pennsylvania Central and the Erie system will be seriously injured by his strategic stroke, but this hardly half. In a few months immense locomotives pulling 100 loaded cars will be thundering over the heads of the astonished people of Cincinnati. Mr. Huntington [illegible] the extended road will be [illegible] must massive in the [illegible] high built over and above the houses of the city. Two thousand Italian workmen are now on their way to this country to help construct the road. Mr. Huntington proposes to revolutionize the coal business of that corner of the earth. Five hundred coal cars, with a capacity of twenty-five tons each, are being built for him, and he will furnish coal from his inexhaustible coal bed on the Chesapeake and Ohio far cheaper than Pittsburg dealers have dream of.

DECORATION DAY AT AUSTIN.

AUSTIN, TEXAS, May 30.—Decoration day was celebrated here this afternoon under the auspices of John B. Hood camp Confederate veterans and Post No. 10 G. A. R. Hon. John Hancock delivered an address at the cemetery. From the state cemetery a large procession marched to the city cemetery where a majority of the Confederate soldiers lie buried. Here also lies the body of Gen. Tom Green, whose monument was covered with flowers. [illegible] Decoration day was never more generally observed in this city.

STRAHAN OR WALDO?

PORTLAND, Or., May 30.
To the Editor of The Oregonian:

The rude and unmanly attacks made by certain parties upon Hon. R. S. Strahan, democratic candidate for supreme judge, have excited a well grounded suspicion as to the good faith and purposes of those who make them, and as to whether the motive is an honorable one or founded in private interest. The parties engaged in the assault upon the reputation of an honorable citizen are well known to many and their names could be given and the motives which actuate them easily explained. It is not because they have any ill feeling towards Mr. Strahan or that they believe a single one of the charges against him that they make this attack. If Marshall himself were the opponent of Waldo the same attack would have been made. The parties for a particular reason were determined in the outset to have Judge Waldo nominated. One of them demanded that he should be made a delegate to the convention to help secure the renomination of Judge Waldo. "Because," he said, "I am personally interested." This expression furnishes the key to all these attacks upon Mr. Strahan. After a desperate effort in the republican convention Waldo's nomination was secured, although bitterly opposed by a large proportion of the delegates. The next point was to secure his election. They knew there was strong opposition to him in his own party and they could not hope for success on his own merits, so like narrow minded and unscrupulous men they prepared themselves to vilify and traduce whoever might be nominated on the other ticket, and hence adopted the methods which have been pursued. In the language of one of the papers, "the campaign liar is abroad." In their eager desire for Waldo's success they say Mr. Strahan is an exponent of ring rule, while Waldo is belched forth from the very convention which they claim was manipulated by the [illegible] Does this seem consistent?

It looks very much to an outsider as though there might be a judicial ring which would bear investigation. Every attack on Strahan bears the same earmarks. It all emanates from men with but one purpose, one aim. If a political ring, who will point the blacksmith [illegible] judicial ring, which seeks to control the very fountain head of justice in this state.

I do not charge Waldo with being [illegible] land steal or swamp land grab, but it is very conclusive that he is closely connected with a scheme more iniquitous than either, one that would bring the blush of shame to the cheek of any one with any sense of justice—the Bailey land claim grab. It is true that Strahan did vote for aid for wagon roads, but it was done in response to an almost universal demand for such aid. It was not the granting of the aid but the manipulation afterwards which caused the trouble, and if Justice had more respect for Judge Waldo's family than for his election he would not have referred to swamp lands. It is stated that a near and family relative of the judge's got away with considerable plunder gotten from one of these grants, and it is also said that Waldo even now holds some of the identical swamp land warrants which this relative had received on that wagon road deal.

As to the locks and canal at the falls of the Willamette, let Justice compare rates on the Columbia for the same distance and then estimate the millions which have been saved to the producers of the Willamette valley thereby. The very day the locks were opened freights declined [illegible] per ton from all points in the Willamette valley. Has this worked a hardship on our producers?

Judge Waldo's wonderful knowledge of law is a source of infinite gratification to "Justice." He might have referred to the case of Quimby vs. McKee, reported at page [illegible] Oregon, whereby citations from the year books [illegible] demonstrated that in an action for slander it is not necessary to prove the slanderous words [illegible] the day laid in the complaint. This decision [illegible] can be found [illegible] will Justice tell where [illegible] the opinion in the case of Bailey vs. Dickinson [illegible] in which Waldo decreed this same cabal—of which [illegible] is probably one—these dissatisfied guardians of the purity of the bench—over $40,000 worth of real property within this city.

So far as Judge Strahan is concerned the following quotation from a paper published at his own home is but a fair expression of his reputation, standing and ability as a lawyer and as a man [illegible] who know him.

We give the facts as they actually exist and challenge contradiction. Judge Strahan is now and has never been largely or at all interested in swamp lands, either as owner, attorney or otherwise. He does not now own, nor has he ever owned, fifteen thousand feet of swamp land. He has never acted as attorney at any time in any swamp land contest of any kind except in the case of F. Cooper, an actual settler, against Hastings & Brooks, a swamp land grabber. In this case the board of commissioners held that the swamp land grant took precedence over the school land grant. Their decision was sought to be reviewed, and Judge Strahan and the supreme court [illegible] held that their determination was not reviewable. But notwithstanding this decision, Judge Strahan, after the election of Gov. Thayer, succeeded in getting the board to reconsider the action of the former board, and convinced them that the former ruling was erroneous. So that Cooper prevailed through Judge Strahan's energy and a ruling was obtained which took many thousands of acres from the swamp land claimant and gave them to the school fund. Judge Strahan is not and never has been the salaried attorney of the Oregon Pacific. He has attended to some of the litigation in the company, [illegible] as many other attorneys have done, and he would be glad to do so. Judge Strahan is not now and has never been attorney for the Willamette Valley & Cascade Mountain wagon road company, either directly or indirectly, except in one single case in this county about nine years ago. The fact is Hon. George E. Chamberlain was the attorney for the company until his death, and then attorneys in Portland were employed in his place, who still have charge of the business of that company. So much for these charges, and we challenge the man to show a state of facts different from those herein set forth. Judge Strahan is an able lawyer and an upright, conscientious man. He possesses besides all those qualifications essential to a good judge. He is honest and is faithful to every trust. He is an affable, whole souled gentleman. He treats all alike, shows no such animus as race prejudices. Can Judge Waldo or his [illegible] say so much?

Do the people of this state want the supreme court of [illegible] driveler? They doubtless want an honest judge, but is it necessary in order to be honest one should be a crank? Do they want to [illegible] a judge for the purposes of one case, or to [illegible] dictate upon all? Do they want justice dealt by a band of scheming land sharks? We think not.

Thursday night of last week this judicial ring [illegible] meeting at a law office in this city and resolved to maintain a vigorous onslaught on Strahan and continue to write letters. Their number on this occasion was increased by the presence of the very unselfish and disinterested clerk of the supreme court. Is it not enough to know that such a ring exists and that they are so anxious to support and elect Waldo that one of them leaves the court which he is briefly presiding over to electioneer through the southern part of the state in his behalf? But these "are honorable men," these self appointed guardians to secure suitable magistrates of the law.

LONDON, May 30.—The Daily News reproduces speeches made by Ben. Disraeli in the house of commons in 1844. Disraeli in summing up the Irish question said: "Ireland is teeming with a starving population and [illegible] absentee aristocracy and an alien church and the weakest executive in the world. The only remedy is revolution, which is prevented by connection with powerful England. Therefore England is [illegible] position, being the cause of the misery of Ireland. The duty of the English minister, therefore, is to effect by his policy all the changes which revolution would do forcibly. That is the Irish question in its integrity. American girls are all the rage with us just now on account of that sprightliness, their bright vivacity and intelligence, their style of carriage and general get up, and above all their language and beauty. It is said, however, that she was heavily laden with bad whisky, which was taken to Alaska and disposed of to natives. It is claimed she was under the surveillance of [illegible] of the revenue cutters, but for some reason best known to the officers the vessel was allowed to sail with her cargo.

THE WATER COMMITTEE AND BULL RUN SURVEYS.

PORTLAND, May [illegible]

To the Editor of The Oregonian:

The citizens of Portland have for a long time been anxious for some solution of the water question. The various plans proposed have been considered by them in silence, or without any organized efforts at expression on their part, and even if they desired there seems to be no means by which they may be heard or such expression regarded. The people have [illegible] and for a long time it has been evident that they know what they need and in general what they expect to have at the hands of the committee, fifteen in that of private enterprise. The latter has been restricted, curbed and secretly fastened down by the behavior of some rich men who have their own ends more at heart than the people's welfare. From that part of the subject to the committee: A system of surveys has been ordered on lines projected by myself more than fourteen years ago, which in the last few years, for the purchase of lands, surveys and general expenses, have cost myself and associates tens of thousands of dollars. The plan was commenced as a private enterprise and carried forward as such, and we have used all due diligence to accomplish it, and if we had not been hindered by injunction suits and other annoyances the water from one of the purest streams in the world, fresh from the eternal snows, would now be running in the streets of the city. The special act of the legislature last autumn did not deprive us of the right to enter the city, but it placed as was intended new barriers in the way of its accomplishment. The committee nominated themselves and were legislated into office for ten years. They have entered upon the trust imposed by the law, and we ought to expect the justice of the law if we cannot have its mercy. And we ought to expect just action from men high in the scale of wealth and position, who better than others should know the worth of moral acts and common honesty. But it seems to be otherwise. A part at this committee at least have given their consent to a scheme designed to deprive myself and associates of years of labor and large sums of money. There is no other explanation of the manner in which the surveys have been conducted and other recent events.

The daily papers said that Mr. Engineer Smith had reported his first or lower line to be impracticable. Here I want to say that the ground he objected to is not steep, irregular, or rough. [illegible] from the Canyon garden to the Cardwell's home [illegible] across the stone [illegible] and the worst part of the western hills. There is more or less ground than from the Canyon to Terwilliger's, say two miles, with [illegible] distance from the source to the city twenty-seven and [illegible] miles, if properly surveyed. Mr. Smith did not, and would not [illegible] [illegible] per cent and [illegible] the grade may be [illegible] be arranged for three-fourths of [illegible] was unknown or wilfully [illegible] The line also crosses the west bluff at Sandy river and enters the flat ground sixteen miles east of the city at an elevation of 415 feet. There is another place where these bluffs can be reached with less than 600 feet above [illegible] at the corner of Washington street. As a consequence all lines must be mapped higher up, adding length and expense.

Mr. Smith was directed to survey a line over the bluffs at this latter point, 630 feet, so the papers said. But did he do it? At an elevation of 715 feet he crossed them and from thence into the city, twenty-one and a half miles, this triumph of engineering follows the wagon road from nearly the highest point on the bluffs to Portland. This extra 100 feet would require more than a mile of added length, and perhaps other difficulties, at the grade of fifteen feet to the mile which he proposes to use as the base for velocity in a 24-inch pipe under pressure the whole distance. The line crossing the Sandy bluffs at 610 feet was the one at first projected by me and surveyed, and after a careful estimate it showed more than $100,000 added expense and was abandoned by us. This last and higher line 100 feet above it and two miles longer contains the crossing of Little Sandy river, one half mile in a solid cement rock canyon 225 feet deep and a bridge 120 feet long. This crossing is as expensive as the crossing of the main Sandy river below the mouth of the Bull Run on the lowest or shortest line, and has a vertical pressure of 265 feet, ten or fifteen feet more than the main or lowest crossing. In addition to this, the crossing of the main Sandy river on this highest line above the mouth of Bull Run is about one and a half miles long, and has a vertical pressure of 480 feet for a considerable distance, against three [illegible] in the lowest line and 240 or 250 feet vertical pressure.

These things do not point to economy or right principles of engineering, but to some other object. Mr. A. G. Cunningham and myself own certain lands and water privileges on Bull Run river. We have offered them for sale to the water committee, as requested in their advertisement, to be paid for in annual payments without interest, at an annual rate of about half what it costs to pump the volume of water required, nor are they to pay any of these moneys until the works are in operation. We have for several years been bearing the expense of our land purchase and surveys. We could not make, as we look at it, better terms. The property is valuable for other purposes in connection with the water which we expect to fully utilize. We are willing that the city shall possess itself of one of the most beautiful and purest streams in the world, the only one in the region not too far or [illegible] difficulties having volume and elevation enough for doing away with [illegible] required in a system of gravitation water works.

It seems these propositions are not of the kind required, and some of the persons connected with the committee are seeking means to evade them. I say some because I do not yet think all of the gentlemen composing the committee will lend themselves to the scheme proposed. Mr. Smith's [illegible] reaches an elevation of 700 feet, only [illegible] used in the city service, the remainder is consumed in grade. To reach this elevation requires three and a half miles more distance up the river and also a mile of blasting in addition to the matters mentioned before. The total distance by this line to the east bank of the Willamette river is thirty-one and a half miles. Why should a man go three miles further and 100 feet higher? Not for economic reasons surely. If you will look at the Oregon City Enterprise, May 7th, you will see the [illegible] notice of application of Robert [illegible] Morrow and J. D. Meyer of Portland, to purchase timber lands on Bull Run river in section 3, township 1 south, range 6 east. These lands are at the mouth of a small stream flowing into Bull Run from the southeast—not the main stream carrying the snow water.

Up this stream the committee's surveyors ran a line nearly a mile and obtained thereby an elevation of 700 feet above all former lines with which [illegible] the Sandy bluffs. It is currently reported that the object of this last survey was to avoid and make of no effect the claims we have to Bull Run, [illegible] a detour to the south pass over other lands [illegible] Yet this is not the case, though they [illegible] We have no objection to the selection of other places by the committee. They have as much money for making the examinations as [illegible] and the work is before them and us. The knowledge of this stream came to the public principally through my personal effort and labor through many a weary day, and the committee's [illegible] can wear out his boots and brains as successfully as I can on other parts of the public domain without resort to confiscation of private rights by the entry of these lands and the proposal to take by force what we have practically acquired by our money, labor and knowledge. Better counsel will prevail. If the committee cannot see the way to take our word as we did theirs when they advertised they can say no, as in any other business matter, and we will then be left free to other propositions which we cannot now consider. This sort of dealing while our proposal is under consideration cannot but be scorned by all honorable men.

CHARLES B. TALBOT.

THE MORAL IDEA IN IT.

PORTLAND, May 29, 1886.
To the Editor of The Oregonian:

When it is a fact that in this as in all other campaigns the people seek something of a higher and better nature than dry political science or the Irish Hoop service of politics commission merchants, has been furnished the readers of The Oregonian in an admirable and fitting paragraphic measurement of the statesmanship of the candidates of the two old parties. [illegible] to-day's arraignment of these parties under the lead of Cornelius and Pennoyer will be applauded in the heart of every right thinking voter, whether or not he will approve.

There is something more than pique, partisan politics or partisanship as the actuating and controlling motive with the majority of our people, something of vital import in the sharp conflict of forces, in the contention of principles and methods in our present phenomenal campaign. The people are demanding, as the best element of the republican party demanded in the last presidential campaign, a moral idea in visible form. It may be represented by a concrete thing, like a party, but it must be incarnate in men as leaders and candidates whose lives and records will not be a contrast to the principle. The majority of those who are prohibitionists to-day have left the republican and the democratic parties, not because they are no longer republicans or democrats, but because they are practical advocates of a principle in government which is demanded by the most exalted Christian and moral sentiment of this country, but which finds no place or countenance or honest encouragement in either of the parties named. The traders in commercial politics, the men who are more interested in loaves and fishes than in conviction or principle, will tell you that at the last moment party fealty and certain phases of personal interest will neutralize if not dissipate all the professions of those who have declared in favor of a clean moral sentiment in this direction. They made the mistake at the last national election of taking popular attitude for popular gullibility.

It has been decided once for all that not only shall the masses be educated, but in the form and method of our teaching there must be the training which recognizes the ethics of complete living in the Christian sense. Christian conscience and morality in government. It is upon this principle that the republic rests and moves. It is the seminal principle of the constitution, and any persistent rejection of it will be fatal to the highest and brightest hopes of human progress. The popular sentiment of this country confesses and vindicates this principle; the national heart is alive to it, and the national pulse is quickened whenever it is threatened. For a rounded out century this beacon light to the peoples who grope in the shadows towards man's higher privileges has flashed out from the summit of Time's slow building pyramid, and it is something Americans will not willingly let die.

"THE OREGONIAN" AND THE CAMPAIGN.

To-day THE OREGONIAN as an independent journal completes the round of its "engagements" for the political campaign by printing a speech for Col. Cornelius. It has now allowed all the candidates for the governorship to speak for themselves through its columns. It has moreover given the fullest opportunity to all persons to discuss through its columns the many phases of the only three sided contest the state has known for many years. It has declined nothing that was intelligible, or important enough to be printed, save sundry communications whose writers interdicted the disclosure of their names, if the same should be asked for by those whom they desired to criticise; and it has declined these on the principle that no one should ask a newspaper to be responsible for that which the writer himself is too cowardly to avow or assume.

It has been the aim and purpose of THE OREGONIAN to deliver its own comments on the candidates in the impartial spirit that befits a journal which gives a hearing to all parties, but is not a special advocate of any. In the absence of all defined or definable issues between the leading parties, it is fit and proper for a journal that is looked to as a vehicle of information by men of all parties, to let the whole aspect of the campaign, from its beginning to its close, be reflected through its columns, without trying to make a case for one party or another, where no case actually exists.

Whoever consults the platforms of the two old parties will find in them a similarity more striking than anything ever presented in like documents within the memory of living men. Either platform could be substituted for the other, and neither republican nor democrat could tell the difference. The only distinguishing mark is that the one purports to be the republican document and the other the democratic. The form of party, if one may judge from these platforms, has "dislimned and become indistinct as water is in water."

Could a straight issue be made in Oregon on the old principles and purposes that divided the two parties, there is no doubt that there would be found a very considerable republican majority. But it is no longer possible to make a straight issue on old principles and purposes. It can no more be done than the old armies can again be set in array against each other in the field of Gettysburg. Voters, therefore, will deal with the situation as they find it. They who see an unworthiness in candidates, or in the methods and purposes which candidates are identified with, will not spare the rebuke. They who want to give ring rule "ashake" will do it. They who see in prohibition the coming issue that will make a distinct line of division between parties (where none now exists) will vote that way.

Though republican in most of views, and particularly upon the old historical questions, which certainly are not in issue here and now, THE OREGONIAN has in this campaign asserted the same independent position which it has taken upon many former occasions. Consistently with its self-respect and with its ideas of public duty, it could not lend its aid to those who, in the name of the republican party, are "working" politics solely for selfish ends, through ring and machine methods. Every one sees that the republican party in Multnomah county is under domination of a ring, whose members have organized this business into a regular profession or pursuit; and every one sees, moreover, that the ring largely controls the action of the party of the state. To it the scandalous strifes and equally scandalous neglects and blunders of recent legislatures have been due. The men who have a despotic control of the republican party presume upon the republican majority in the state, and believe that through it they can reach their objects. The study is how to stifle or suppress the action of the people for public objects, and to make the enterprise contribute to the personal interests and desires of the members of the ring. This member of the ring must have such a man for circuit judge; that member of the ring must control the county court; this gang must have their man in the state treasury, and the entire combination must agree as to who shall be governor. Upon the same principle members of the legislature, and particularly the senators who will "hold over" and vote upon the election of the next senator of the United States, are named as far as possible throughout the state. Is this sort of business ever to receive a check? If so, can there ever be a fitter time than now?

No one can deny the existence of this notorious abuse. It is open, gross, mountainous. It stands out now more offensively than at any former time in the history of the state, and there is no national question to obscure it, or to withdraw attention from it. Party organs, that depend for existence on party favor, of course will not see it, still less will they criticise it or condemn it. For them there may be some excuse; but for a newspaper that is independent and can speak against such a system and yet would fail at proper times to do it, the neglect would be unpardonable. Nor can this just criticism be estopped by the answer that certain candidates of the opposition are objectionable men. Pretexts and excuses, if you allow them, will never be wanting.

THE SOLDIER DEAD.

Of the soldier dead we honor to-day the last to fall in battle are full twenty-one years in their graves. Some of them still sleep on the famous fields where they fell, buried by hostile hands; some of them were sent home tenderly to their families and their precious dust is mingled with the soil of the various states, of whose patriotic manhood they were in life the stout example and in death the blessed memory. What manner of men were these Union soldiers, in pious reverence for whom we annually contrive these elaborate honors of speech and ceremony? Perhaps we cannot better tell our growing boys what sort of soul and stock the dead soldiers of the Union stood for than by telling how the surviving soldiers of the Union behaved when after four years of battle they suddenly broke ranks and became citizens. An English historian, Green, says: "Quietly and without a struggle, as men who bowed to the inscrutable will of God, the farmers and traders who had dashed to pieces Rupert's chivalry on Naseby field, who had scattered at Worcester the 'army of the aliens,' and driven into helpless flight the sovereign that now came to enjoy his own again, who had renewed beyond the sea the glories of Cressy and Agincourt, had mastered the parliament, had brought a king to justice and the block, had given laws to England and even held Cromwell in awe, became traders and farmers again and were known among their fellow-men by no other sign than their greater soberness and industry."

It was an army of farmers and traders that fought for the enlargement of civil and religious liberty under Cromwell; it was an army of farmers and traders that fought against taxation without representation under Washington; it was an army of farmers and traders that, from ocean to ocean in the armies of the Union deep bolted with their swords the republic which Washington founded, to the bedrock of nationality. It was the Puritan in Cromwell's time, and it has always been the Puritan stock ever since, that, whether he exchanges the weapons of war for the arts and garb of peace, or pulls off his farmer's frock for fighting gear, is in war or peace, above all things the champion of the largest liberty for the greatest number. For the safety of free institutions the peaceful Puritan will go to war, but the moment that human rights have been rescued from danger, the terrible Puritan soldier hastens to resume his work as a citizen for while he is a formidable fighter, the victories of peace are his pleasure rather than the stern necessities of war; because the only excuse he accepts for the brutalities of war is when they are endured to secure the blessings of peace. He will fight for right rather than buy out of a war by negotiating a cowardly peace with wrong. The men of the armies of the Union were primarily sound citizens who became soldiers only when it was a bitter choice between fighting for the national supremacy of freedom or striking our colors to the black flag of slavery. Victory long deferred came at last, and as swiftly, as quietly as the pious army of Cromwell, our soldiers became citizens, glad to welcome peace, sad only that they had to conquer peace through a tremendous war. Of this great army of farmers and traders and craftsmen that went to war from 1861 to 1865, not only the living, but the dead are with us; the living as a rule keep themselves in honor by their conduct, while the dead, as Lowell finely said, live

As thrills of long-hushed tone live in the viol,
  Making our souls grow fine,
With keen vibrations from the touch divine
  Of noble natures gone.

The thought that obscures this occasion is that our bravest and our best are

"The voiceless, who have known
The cross, but not the crown of glory."

They never lived to swell the jubilee of the restored Union; they died without knowing whether we were victors or vanquished; they never shared in the wild applause and eloquent enthusiasm which welcomed home their surviving comrades; they "died for me and you" ere the thick fog of rebellion had fairly lifted before the dissipating sunlight of a courageous and patriotic nation, roused to the full exercise of its vast resources of light and heat. Let us hope that those who died without knowledge of the ultimate issue of the conflict, in which they lost all that is lovely in life's rosy morning, do at least know to-day that they did not die in vain; that the Mississippi flows unvexed to the sea; that the flag of the Union floats more proudly than ever from ocean to ocean, from Maine to Mexico, from the great lakes to the Gulf, and that their graves are the Mecca to which the state they saved annually makes affectionate pilgrimage.

When our nation is not decent enough to pay pious respect to the memory of her patriot dead the fibre of our national manhood will be rotten beyond redemption. Not all the art of Italy; not all the culture of the schools; not all the wealth and wiles of Wall street will save a nation that has no sentiment of respect for those who died in defense of a great free state with all those inestimable blessings that a free state implies. Patriotic memories are the strength of a nation.

Of what avail is plow or sail
Or land or life
If freedom fail?

OBJECT LESSONS.

Jeff Davis said we were a brave people, but so selfish and shrewd that we would buy out of war rather than fight out of it. In May, 1861, Carl Schurz said: "Your war will be very short; the North is a nation of shopkeepers, and shopkeepers never fight. You will compromise the moment the war begins to pump your pockets." Three years afterwards found Schurz fighting Lee at Gettysburg, and we fancy when he saw 80,000 "Yankees" face 90,000 Confederates in a terrible three days' battle, Schurz made up his mind that the Yankee peddler's heart of ice could become a coal of fire; that a Yankee, when warmed to his work, would fight as fiercely as the London apprentices and tradesmen did under Cromwell. Last year at Worcester, Mass., turned out to the funeral of Thomas Plunkett, a brave Irishman who lost both arms saving the flag of his regiment at the first battle of Fredericksburg. That spectacle was money in the pocket of Massachusetts; her citizens of Irish stock will never forget it; for they are a people of sentiment and pugnacity; their patriotic individuality is as indestructible and eternal as the stars that shine over the Shannon, and they will never forget when the next war comes that Massachusetts officially made an humble but gallant Irishman's name and story as stimulating and inspiring a page in history as that of Sergeant Jasper, Moll Pitcher or John Brown. The Yankee takes no heroes on trust or tradition, but all Worcester, all Massachusetts, knew that Tom Plunkett lost his arms to save the colors of the state; so this city of 50,000 cynical traders and peddlers took off its hat to the memory of Tom Plunkett, and buried him with conspicuous honors. The funeral was an object lesson to the growing generation of the state. It said to every boy that every citizen may be compelled to become the soldier of his state; that if he bears himself nobly he will command honor while living and reverence when dead. Such honors are dear to decent men who desire to be known at home for courage rather than cowardice. At the battle of the Alma, when that fine soldier, Sir Colin Campbell, was leading the Highland brigade into action, he said: "Boys, old Scotland forever; if any of you misbehave, remember I'll post your names at the door of the kirk where you were born." The average Union soldier always knew, as Plunkett did, that whether he behaved well or ill in battle his name would be posted "at the door of the kirk" or the cot where he was born.

Mr. Allen Francis, for many years American consul at Victoria and who, under this civil service reform administration, was removed to make room for a democrat, has just returned to Victoria, after an absence of several months. His return was made the occasion of an enthusiastic reception by the people of Victoria, by whom he is highly respected and who wish for his reassignment to his old post.

There is a proposition to abandon the military station at Fort Klamath and the people thereabout are greatly concerned about it. We cannot believe that there is, as the Roseburg Plaindealer fears, great danger of an Indian outbreak if the troops should go, but certainly they should remain as long as there is a considerable body of Indians in the country.

MEMORIAL DAY.

Bend soft, oh skies, above the graves
Our fallen heroes fill,
In far Potomac marshes,
On the height of Georgia hill;
Where the blue Virginia mountain
In their lonely grandeur frown,
Where the tide of Chicamauga flows
By fort invested town.

Blow soft, oh winds, around them,
With your freighted sweets and balm;
And the rhythm of your numbers
Flowing into song and calm,
Say the Northern heart is keeping
In its silent deeps aglow,
All the sacred recollections
Treasured in the long ago.

Smile soft, oh flowers, bending low
Like friends with sadd and eyes
Moist with the dear remembrance of saintly sacrifice.
Rise, gracious Lily, multiply, oh Rose, in regal pride,
Fit emblems of the loyal ones who lived and loved and died.

And thou, O flag of freedom,
Fan their slumbers where they lie
At morning toss and flutter,
And at evening float and fly.
Keep guard o'er all thy children,
As upon the wall they stood
Baptizing for the future,
All thy folds in crimson blood.

Float on above the living, float on above the dead,
While a hope awaits fruition,
While a prayer remains unsaid.
This motto on thy bosom bear to
Earth's remotest parts:
God keep the Union ever,
Give the people loyal hearts.

A SENTIMENT FOR TO-DAY.

The earth has healed her wounded breast;
The cannons plough the fields no more
The heroes rest; oh, let them rest
In peace along the peaceful shore;
For peace they fought: for peace they fell;
They sleep in peace, and all is well.

FERRY RATES.

The following comparison of ferry rates is submitted for information to the public. The comparison shows that the rates at Portland are not greater on the whole, but average less, than the rates at the North and East river ferries, New York, or the rates at the bridges and ferries at Cincinnati, Newport and Kansas City. The commutation rates at Portland, moreover, are one-third less than those given in the table, and there is no doubt that ferry rates here are on the whole as cheap now as at other cities of the United States.

At any rate I will not be the last one in the race for that office.

LOCAL AND GENERAL.

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE OF AN OLD VETERAN.—Oliver Wright, formerly a soldier in the 106th New York infantry, was found in an unconscious condition in his room at Mrs Allen's lodging house on Morrison street, between Fourth and Fifth, a little after noon yesterday. On the table near his bed was found a note from which it was gathered that he had attempted suicide by swallowing an ounce of laudanum. Dr A C Panton was immediately summoned, and administered a powerful emetic hypodermically which saved Wright's life. Wright is about 60 years of age and is completely broken down. He was severely wounded in the hip during his service in the army and some time since the wound troubled him so much that he had to be sent to the hospital. After he came out of the hospital he went to work at blacking boots or anything he could do to make an honest living, but when his hips again grew so bad that he could not work he abandoned himself to despair and determined to put an end to his misery. He has failed to secure the pension justly due him on account of some want of proof and having neglected to join the G A R, he is now without means of getting to a soldier's home. It is a very sad thing to see one who has fought and bled for his country reduced to such straits in his old age, and it is hoped that charitably disposed people will assist in sending the disabled veteran to a soldier's home, where he can pass his remaining days in comfort.

WILL ACCEPT ANOTHER GUARANTEE.—The following appears in the London Financial News of May 8 and will be of interest here: Mr Da Costa of New York, the counsel to whom the two bondholders committees referred the legal question as to the power of the Central Pacific railroad company to guarantee the bonds of the Oregon & California railroad company, has, taking into consideration the fact that the Central Pacific railroad company is leased to the Southern Pacific company, given an opinion that the Central Pacific railroad company has no power to give the guarantee required but that the Southern Pacific company has full power to do so. Under these circumstances C P Huntington, representing the Central Pacific interest, has offered to substitute the guarantee of the Southern Pacific company for that of the Central Pacific railroad company, the proposed transaction as regards both the bondholders and stockholders of the Oregon & California railroad company, remaining in other respects substantially unaltered. It is believed that the adjourned meeting of stockholders of the Oregon & California railroad to be held in Portland on the 8th of June will ratify the change of guarantee proposed and also that the Southern Pacific company will shortly thereafter acquire possession of the O & C R R.

TWO BOYS DROWNED.—Arthur and Robert Rutherford aged 7 and 9 years, sons of Mrs Rutherford, a widow residing near the corner of Fifth and Jefferson streets, were drowned at the foot of Madison street yesterday afternoon. The boys had been to Sunday school and afterward strolled down to the wharf where they saw a dead fish in the water and got upon a smooth log to reach after it, when the log turned and they were both pitched into the water headforemost. The only witness of the accident was Maggie Walton, a little girl, who gave the alarm. The hats of the boys were found floating on the water, and John La Chapelle, who has his boat house there, commenced grappling for the bodies at once and the work was kept up by others but up to dark without success. It is probable that the bodies went under the wharf. Later—About 8 30 the body of the younger child was recovered with a grapnel. Coroner Cooke was notified but did not deem an inquest necessary. A report was in circulation around the boat house that the older of the two boys was not drowned, but that being frightened at his brother's drowning, ran away and was afraid to return home. However the story of the Walton girl that both boys fell into the water is no doubt true.

READY TO RENEW FLOURING MILL ROLLS.—The Portland Iron works, O Clarke & Co proprietors, corner of Thirteenth and N streets, have just put in operation a plant for grinding and corrugating flouring mill rolls. The machinery and attachments which are of the latest and most approved pattern are from Connecticut and cost about $4000. This firm is prepared to furnish flouring mill and sawmill irons and do a general jobbing business in all kinds of castings and machinery. Their works are now occupying three fourths of the block bounded by Twelfth, Thirteenth, N and O streets and comprise a machine shop, pattern shop, smith shop and foundry all conveniently arranged with a special view to convenience and rapid and economical execution of work. They have also in connection a successfully conducted boiler shop under the management of Monks & Norton, who make all kinds of boiler and sheet-iron work.

IVES AND THE TRANSCONTINENTAL.—The Boston Herald of the 15th has the following: Oregon & Transcontinental [illegible] The scheme of the Brayton Ives party is said to be to get control of this company in the interest of the Northern Pacific, to bounce the "Yankee" president, Mr Elijah Smith, and having secured control of the Oregon Railway & Navigation company through the O & T, to lease it to the Northern Pacific, thus settling the Cascade division problem. It is a grand scheme but unfortunately it was would be no more legal to-day than it was when the parties who were trying to lease to the Northern and Union Pacific roads ran against an insurmountable legal obstacle. Mr Ives's previous encounters with the Yankee president have been bad for Mr Ives, who however always comes up smiling for another bout.

NEEDLESS ALARM.—About 11 30 yesterday forenoon an alarm of fire was turned in from box 4. It appears that a lot of cut grass had been piled up against Fretlander's stable near the corner of Hall and First streets, where it had become dry and that some one passing had dropped a cigar stub on the pile, setting it smouldering. Mr Fretlander on coming out of his house saw a great smoke coming apparently from his stable, rushed across the street and turned in an alarm. The fire was put out with a bucket of water. The firemen rather enjoyed the turnout as the streets being clean the engines did not have to be washed on account of it, but in muddy weather the boys do not hanker after such alarms.

MOONLIGHT EXCURSION.—Tickets are out for a moonlight excursion by Garfield Post No 3 G A R on the elegant steel steamship Olympian on Wednesday evening, June 16. This will be the first trip of this steamer the present season in Oregon waters, and no doubt many will avail themselves of the opportunity to see the splendid appointments of the steamer and have an enjoyable time besides. The reputation already established by Garfield post in social matters is a sufficient guaranty of the entire success of this excursion. There will be plenty of room for dancing, and the carrying capacity of the boat is almost unlimited.

THE VANCOUVER TRIP TO-DAY.—The arrangements made for going over to-day on the Lurline are such as to afford every comfort and convenience, as the boat is entirely devoted to the use of passengers for the day. She will leave Morrison street at 8 30 o'clock and go direct with the barge and returning at 3 30 P M. No live stock carried or delayed mails. Fare 50 cents round trip, children half price.

HOLSTEIN FRIESIAN CATTLE.—D C Stewart of Forest Grove, Oregon, arrived last evening at the Grand stables with a choice lot of Holstein Friesian cattle recently selected from the noted herd of T G Yeomans & Sons of Walworth, N Y. These cattle will remain at the Grand stables until Tuesday morning when they will be shipped to his farm on the west side road, near Forest Grove.

TO-DAY'S MAILS.—The postoffice will be open to-day from 10 to 11 A M and from 4 to 5 P M. Carrier will make one delivery. That made by number one two and three will include eastern mail to business houses.

BALLOON ASCENSION.—A large balloon which was successfully tried yesterday will be sent up from the ship yard at the east side landing of the Jefferson street ferry at [illegible] o'clock this evening.

TO VANCOUVER.—The Lurline will leave at 8 30 this morning from Alder street, reaching the Garrison early in time for the exercises and returning with passengers at 4 P M.

Services Yesterday in Several Churches—Necessity of Special Work for Young Men.

Mr I W Watkins spoke yesterday morning in the First Congregational church, Rev E T Cur[illegible] pastor. He took for his subject "The Splendors of our Civilization the Danger of the Times," and drew from the theme many valuable lessons showing that peculiar dangers are around us and that a complete revolution in the business and social world has left the young men of our day exposed to peculiar and trying dangers. The care which friends and employers of young men exercised over them fifty years ago cannot, on account of the volume of business done and number of men employed, now be exercised. The association on the part of the church is providing for the varied needs of these young men and thus meets the demand created by circumstances. He further stated that the state provides for the intellectual development of young men through its efficient school system but it fails to provide for the development of character, therefore each community must make its own provision to supply the need, and this they are doing through Young Men's Christian associations.

In the afternoon a meeting was held in the First Baptist church of East Portland, when Mr Watkins spoke on the origin and development of association work, showing that these associations surround the globe and may be found in most all commercial centers.

A conference with the members of the East Portland branch followed the address, at which time many practical questions were asked and answered. In the evening an address was given in Taylor street M E church. David's solicitude for his son Absalom was taken as the basis of remark. His solicitude for the welfare of the young man was shown to be greater than that for his kingdom. Mr Watkins went on to show that there is occasion to-day for parents to exercise the same degree of earnest solicitude for the moral welfare of their sons, this on account of the numerous temptations surrounding them and their inclinations to slight the privileges that are offered them for moral development. Out of this condition of things arises the necessity for special and definite work for young men.

THE WAGON ROAD GRANTS.

Affidavits from Various Sources about the Road Eastward from Eugene City.

On Saturday we published the substance of Senator Dolph's report on the wagon road grants of Oregon. A long appendix is printed with the report taken up mainly with affidavits of settlers along the line of and men who have passed over or helped to construct the Oregon Central military wagon road, the road that extends eastward from Eugene. The greater number of these affidavits was taken within the past few months, and a part of them at the instance of the California and Oregon land company, successors to the Oregon Central military wagon road company. No affidavits as regards the Willamette Valley and Cascades Mountain road or The Dalles military road appear to have been taken since 1885, when the committee appointed by the Oregon legislature secured such a large number.

The financial history of the road extending eastward from Eugene City appears from an affidavit made last February by W S Ladd, who says that from the 2d day of May 1864 until the date of its disincorporation I was the president of said company; that there was paid in upon the subscriptions to the capital stock of said company the full sum of $100,000, the whole amount of which was expended in and applied to the construction of said wagon road, and in addition thereto I advanced to said company for the purpose aforesaid the sum of $[illegible] and there was during the construction of said road received from the sale of lands a further sum exceeding $14,000, which was also expended in the construction thereof, making a total cost of said road exceeding $128,000. * * * That in October A D 1874, said company succeeded in negotiating a sale of all its said lands for a consideration then paid to said company of $125,000. Mr Ladd states that he had never [illegible] over the road, but from the information he has acquired he believes the road has been constructed according to law. From an affidavit by E B Pond of San Francisco, now president of the road, it appears that the purchase price, including brokerage, was $250,000.

S J Ferguson, of Springfield, Or, who has acted as [illegible] president and superintendent, avers that over the Cascade mountains the road was cleared to a width of thirty feet, grades were made sixteen feet in width except where under the law grades of less width were authorized, turnouts were made every 500 feet along said narrow grades, and it is his opinion that the entire road has been substantially built.

A H Odell of Salem says in his affidavit: During the summer of 1865 under my supervision the road was built from Crescent lake to Round Grove, a point at the head of Sprague River valley, a distance of about 115 miles. I had in my employ the greater part of the work at several [illegible], an average of forty men. The road was constructed in a substantial manner, the bridges were well built and the road cleared of timber and obstructions for an average width of forty feet. * * *

From Round Grove eastward to the crossing of the mountains of Goose lake was mainly through an open pine timber country of easy grade and easily constructed. This portion of the road through the timber was cleared on an average of forty feet, grades and culverts made on all crossings of streams where necessary to make a good road.

From the mountains to the east of Goose lake eastward is through an open prairie country or table land, the greater portion of the country being barren and comparatively level, but little work being needed or required except on the descents into [illegible] or crossing of ravines.

At all these points easy grades were constructed. In passing over Steins mountain considerable work was necessary in preparing grades and bridging streams as was also clearing out stones on the descent on the eastern slope.

From Steins mountain eastward to the Owyhee river was through an open country, for the greater part barren, offering but few obstructions to travel. Very little work was needed to make a good road but what little was needed we did.

Crossing the Owyhee, which is readily fordable at all seasons except during the high water in early spring, the route lay up the Jordan valley, an easy grade, open country, and requiring little or no labor to construct a road except at one or two points. At these points all necessary work was done to make it an easy road to travel. When completed the road for the entire length was a good mountain road over which freight teams travel without difficulty, and fulfilled the objects for which it was intended. I have frequently traveled over the road between Goose lake and Eugene City and have always found said road in good condition for travel.

D I [illegible] of Portland affirms that he is well acquainted with the road from Springfield eastward to Drews valley, a distance of more than 200 miles; that said road when first constructed by the Oregon Central military wagon road company was a first class road in every respect; was [illegible] and well constructed with easy grades and [illegible] and was of sufficient width for a first class wagon road.

[illegible] Patterson and J. G Gray, of Eugene, testify to the completion of the road over the Cascade mountains. George H Thurston, of Portland, has passed over the entire road and vouches for its proper construction. C B Watson has passed over the eastward 340 miles of the road and believes it to have been legally constructed. John M Drake of Portland, J H Evans, W [illegible] Ingra[illegible], E N Van Brunt and many others testify either to the amounts expended on the road or the good condition in which the road was found after construction.

In opposition to these are several affidavits made in March of this year and many taken last fall by a committee of the Oregon legislature. D Munger, a deputy county clerk of Baker county, states that the road aforesaid is located upon said lands by the surveys or views of the said company; that no regular survey was ever made by said company; that I have traveled over said land from Owyhee river to eastern boundary of state and that no road was ever built over said route by said company; that I have traveled over the road the company where said company should have built all road from Camp Alvord to east boundary of State of Oregon a distance of [illegible] miles; that the roads along said route have been built by private persons, citizens, settlers and teamsters at a cost of $5000 and not by said company.

F I Ross of Baker county says that he was a member of Tellers party of U S surveyors; that the surveys so made crossed the line claimed by said company as its road where it should be at three places, and we explored and hunted for said Oregon Central Military wagon road at said points and other places with a special view to find same but was never able to discover any trace or sign of any such road, no sagebrush cut or stakes, no grading, no bridging, no rocks thrown out or anything or sign of ever being done to make such road by said company.

A Z Hamersly, of Lake county makes an affidavit that in the year 1869 I passed over that portion lying between Eugene City and Goose lake, at which time I found a passable road from Eugene City to Crescent lake, from which point we made a road for a distance of fifty or sixty miles to the old road leading from The Dalles to Fort Klamath, from which latter place I came to Goose Lake valley by way of the road made by emigrants and the military. I have been over that portion lying between the west boundary line of Lake county and Warner valley twice since the year 1882 and I found no road other than that constructed by emigrants and the soldiers. The Oregon Central Military wagon road company have never constructed any road from the western boundary of Lake county, Oregon to Warner lake in Grant county, Oregon."

A W Charlton of the same county states that where said alleged road leaves Sprague river to Warner lake in Lake county said company did not build any road, where said alleged road crosses Goose Lake valley is now, and always has been, impassable for vehicles or even for horsemen. Among other affidavits that the road has not been constructed are those made by Milton Brown, of Summer lake Or, S A Hamersly of Goose lake, George E. Fields, J W Loveless, I S Eccleston, R. E. Tandy, M Wade, H. M. Daniels, of Lake county and a number made by residents of Baker county.

FOR JUDGE SMITH

ST JOHNS May 29

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN

Republicans and democrats alike are gratified to learn that Judge Seneca Smith has consented to become a candidate again for the responsible position of circuit judge. They feel that in the future, as in the past, justice will be meted out to those having business in his court, should he be elected. His just and impartial decisions are worth the highest praise. St. Johns precinct will give him a rousing vote.

BASEBALL.

The Willamettes Defeat the Portlands 20 to 9—The Columbias Beat the Owls, of Salem, 11 to 4.

Yesterday's game was about the poorest, from the spectator's point of view, ever played at The [illegible], the Portlands being defeated by the Willamettes 20 to 9. Commencing this week the Portlands will practice among themselves for a time, then challenge the High school nine, and if successful then tackle the Bishop Scott grammar school club. If again successful they may try conclusions with the Kalama nine and gradually work up to be able to play [illegible] club.

T J Parrott pitched five innings for the Willamettes in fine style and Wills the remainder of the game with good effect. Besides these the only features worthy of notice were Corliss's splendid work at second base and F Smith's capture of two flies in the dead run in left field. The umpire was Mathiot, and as usual his decisions were unsatisfactory. A man standing near the backstop cannot very well see a close play at a base unless he runs toward it and a man who calls a ball going twenty feet behind the foul flag a fair ball must be well to be charitable about it—cross eyed. ### AT OREGON CITY

The Owls of Salem fell easy victims to the Columbias (formerly the Doilets) of this city in the game at Oregon City yesterday, the score standing 11 to 4 in favor of the Columbias. Only four safe hits were made off the delivery of Stimson, who struck out fifteen men. Coffey of the Owls was batted freely and the game was too one-sided to be interesting. Calnan led in the batting, making two double and one three bagger. Smith of the Owls distinguished himself with a one hand catch in left field after a long run.

About 500 people went up from Portland to see the game, three coaches full came down from Salem and half the population of the Falls city turned out. Following is

It is now the rule that railroad men, custom house officials, and steamboat employes—in fact all whose relations to the public are of such a character that it is a matter of convenience to recognize them by their dress—wear blue uniforms. It is also well known that many of these faithful public servants are not paid large salaries, and that in consequence they have to study economy. With this view, KOHN THE CLOTHIER has directed his attention to the production of an ALL-WOOL $18 INDIGO-BLUE SUIT, which cannot be duplicated elsewhere for $20. It should be remembered that this suit is a SPECIALTY, and represents the skill of the best workmen, that it is perfect in construction, is exact as to Cut and Fit, and that for Finish and Durability it is unsurpassed. # A SPEECH BY CORNELIUS.

Delivered at Hillsboro on Thursday Last.

Devoted Mainly to Replies to Pennoyer's Criticisms upon his Public Record

Reported by Thos H. Tongue Esq

On Thursday afternoon last a meeting was held at the court house at Hillsboro. Dr Wilson Bowlby was called to the chair. After some remarks complimentary to Col. Cornelius, the latter spoke substantially as follows:

It seems strange to be introduced where I have lived forty-one years. There are many here to-day who have been my neighbors many years who were among audiences I addressed years ago upon the political issues then pending before the country. They know both my private and public life and to them explanation or defense of my record is unnecessary. The position that I now occupy upon the republican ticket was not sought or solicited by me. I asked no man to vote for me. But the republican state convention saw fit to place me upon the ticket as the republican candidate for governor of Oregon. As a republican I accepted the nomination. I endorse the principles and platform of the republican party and if elected shall do all I can lawfully and honorably to see that the government of this state is conducted upon republican principles.

It has not been my intention to make political speeches. After the democratic convention appointments were made for the democratic candidates to make speeches and opposing candidates were invited to take part in the discussions. I supposed the democrats meant what they said and called upon Mr Pennoyer to arrange for dividing time. He informed me that the state democratic committee had decided not to permit others to address democratic audiences, and he could not consent to divide time. They did consent to let Prof. Miller take part in the discussion but that consent was of short duration. They don't want voters especially democrats to hear anybody but democrats. Since then, my aim has been rather to visit and become acquainted with the people of Oregon and different sections of the state than to make speeches.

My competitor has referred in kind terms to my private and personal character. He says he has known me thirty years and that I am an honest man and a good citizen and neighbor.

I am pleased to be able to say as much for the personal character of Mr Pennoyer. I believe him to be honest and honorable in his private life. But Mr Pennoyer says I have a record as a public man that he cannot endorse. That is not at all strange. Those who know how widely both Mr Pennoyer and myself as well as the parties to which we belong for the last thirty years have differed upon all the great political questions that have been at issue would be very much surprised if Mr Pennoyer should endorse my political record.

When I became a candidate it was not my intention to take up the past or to bring up old questions or issues that have been settled. I thought it better to take up present and living issues. But this course did not suit Mr Pennoyer. He goes back to 1858 to the beginning of my political life. Length of time is no object with him. I shall not follow his example any further than he has made absolutely necessary. But upon this question of record it will be remembered that during the twenty two years that I was in political life there were a great many grave questions before the country and Mr Pennoyer belonged to one political party the democratic. I was a republican. Upon all these leading issues the democratic and republican parties were widely apart—upon all questions growing out of the civil war, upon the right of a state to secede, upon the right of the federal government to coerce the seceding states, the emancipation proclamation, the constitutional amendments, reconstruction these two parties were widely apart and Mr Pennoyer and I were as wide apart as the parties to which we belong. He was an ardent radical democrat, and I was as ardent and radical a republican. It would be very strange therefore if Mr Pennoyer could endorse my political record. To do that he would have to condemn both his own political opinions and the political opinions and acts of his own party. But there is another thing equally strange. From 1856 to 1876 I was in the council and senate of Oregon twenty years in all. This service was continuous except one term when I was engaged in the military service during the Indian wars. Upon all the great questions at issue I acted with the republican party. Mr Pennoyer as editor of the Oregon Herald part of the time was a bitter opponent of the political principles of that party and constantly denounced them. Yet now when looking over my political record since 1866 he does not attempt to make any objections to any political acts I did during that time except in one session, that of 1870. Upon all the other political questions, which party was right? Which was wrong? Which of us, Pennoyer or myself, was right? Which was wrong? Will Mr Pennoyer tell you? He has no delicacy about digging up the past. Why does he not arraign my record on the other questions? He differed with me then. I take his silence as an admission that I was right and he was wrong. But in 1870 Mr Pennoyer finds fault with my action. In order to explain properly it is necessary to look at the political complexion of the state senate and legislature. The democrats had just come into power and had a majority of both houses of the legislature. They were not satisfied with a majority, they had a variety of schemes to put through and wanted two-thirds of the members of the legislature. They wanted full sway and proposed to get it. They did not intend to be interfered with by any conscientious scruples of the governor. Hon. Binger Hermann held a certificate of election. He was turned out and L. F. Mosher a shining light of democracy put in. Hon. J. W. Watts senator elect from Yamhill, was turned out and Wm Newbury put in. This kind of business was kept up until they had the necessary two-thirds. Then business began. The swamp land act, the litigant act—these were only appetizers. The constitution of the United States did not suit them. They began to revise that. The fifteenth amendment had been duly adopted and had been ratified by the Oregon legislature. This democratic legislature, senate and house adopted joint resolutions resolving that the fifteenth amendment was an infringement upon the popular rights and that the said fifteenth amendment be and the same is hereby rejected.

That was Oregon democracy in 1870. Did Mr Pennoyer approve of it then? Does he now? Did he defend or oppose it then? Will he defend it now?

But Mr Pennoyer says I voted against another resolution passed by that democratic body—the resolution in reference to the Burlingame treaty. The motion was introduced and a motion made to pass it without printing. It in effect denied the right or power of the federal government to pass such a treaty. It was another form of the democracy that repealed the fifteenth amendment, another form of asserting the supremacy of the state over the federal government in national affairs. I moved that no copies be printed. Mr Fay left the chair and called Mr Baldwin to it. Even Fay couldn't do some things that Baldwin could. That dignified gentleman decided a motion to print out of order. I appealed. The senate sustained the chair. A motion to refer was made and that was lost. Discussion was stopped by the previous question. The vote was taken and I was called upon to vote. Now fellow citizens, what would you have done? Here was a resolution asserting the worn out doctrine of state supremacy that had been settled by the war to be passed without printing under gag rule. I voted no and have never regretted it. Does Mr Pennoyer mean to affirm the doctrine of that resolution? Does he deny the treaty making power of the federal government? Does he adhere to the doctrine that such treaty making power is subversive of the constitution of the state and that the state has the authority to regulate the emigration of persons not qualified to become citizens? If he does I do not wonder that he cannot indorse my vote on it. He says in his speeches that, if elected governor the Chinese shall not remain in Oregon. Take this statement together with his views on that resolution what does he mean? Does he mean to use the power of the state to abrogate that treaty? Does he intend to drive by violence persons from this state who are here under a treaty made by the federal government? Does he intend to bring about a conflict between the state and federal government, or does he intend to encourage lawlessness and then stand aloof and let it alone? His friends say that it does not mean that, that if Pennoyer is elected he will not resort to or encourage violence. Then, in the name of common sense, what does he mean? If it is a meaningless assertion to be used before election and discarded afterward it is unworthy of a candidate for governor. But those men to whom it is addressed, whose votes are to be obtained by it, those men whom Mr Pennoyer depends on to elect him governor will not call it meaningless. They will understand it as an indorsement of past riots and an invitation to repeat them.

But Mr Pennoyer says I voted to take $300 000 out of the taxpayers of Portland and to give it to Ben Holladay. I have taken Mr Pennoyer to be an honest man and do not mean to accuse him of misrepresentation. It is however difficult to see how any gentleman of intelligence could be led into making such a statement. To say the least he has been very much mistaken and should have read the record more carefully. He had no excuse for not informing himself. It is not necessary to take up time in detailing the history of the construction of Oregon railroads. You all know the main facts. We tried to organize a company and build the West Side railroad. In 1870 the outlook for building it looked very dark. We had lost the land grant. All the subscription had been expended in grading. No one was willing to take hold and build the road. The East Side road had secured the land grant and under it Ben Holladay was pushing the work. Something must be done on this side or we should have no road. There was not sufficient business to pay for building without other help. Holladay offered to build it if the payment of interest upon $300 000 in bonds could be secured for twenty years. Portland seemed willing to guarantee this interest if she could do so. It was found that it could not be done without an amendment of the charter. During the session of the senate Judge Stout then senator from Multnomah county, and a staunch democrat presented a petition signed by about 1200 taxpayers of Portland and containing the names of nearly all of her leading men, asking that the charter be amended. Such a petition had never been presented and refused. Senator Stout presented a bill so amending the charter that Portland could grant the aid if she wanted to do so. It was a bill not to take a cent from Portland but to let Portland do as it liked in the question. The rules were suspended and the bill read by title. A motion was made to suspend the rules and read again by title and carried without one voice against it. The bill as introduced was amended by striking out the name of Ben Holladay and his successors, and allowing the aid to be given to any person or persons who would build the road. For some reason Judge Stout in the final passage voted against the bill. But it was passed by a democratic senate. Judge Strahan voted for it, so did I. The county I represented was interested in the road. It was to run from Portland, through Washington county to McMinnville. The people of Washington county wanted the road. They had contributed money in surveys and grading, and they favored the passage of that bill. Had I voted against it such vote would have been contrary to the wish of my constituents. But why was it right for Judge Strahan to vote for it, and wrong for me? His constituents were not interested in it. The road as proposed would not touch their county nor come near it. Had I not voted for it under the circumstances I suppose it would be charged that it was Holladay's gold that obtained my vote.

Well, the bill was vetoed and failed to become a law. Prevented from guaranteeing the payment of interest upon bonds citizens of Portland raised and paid cash down $100,000. I maintain now that if Portland had guaranteed the interest upon the bonds, annual payments running over twenty years it would have been less burdensome, with its rapid growth than it was to pay $100 000 cash down in 1870.

Mr. Pennoyer says I am a railroad and a corporation man. Well, I will tell you my corporation experience. I did help to survey out a route for a railroad, and besides my own labor helped to pay the expense of surveying. A company was organized to construct the road. They wanted me to act as director, and assigned me one or two shares of stock not worth two cents. The grading was commenced, and we needed money to pay the men. I borrowed $500 and gave it to the company to pay the men and got a few shares of stock that were worthless. I afterwards surrendered my stock and the company was dissolved long ago. Outside a few shares of stock in the county agricultural society and I gave them to a neighbor that is all the stock or interest I ever owned in any corporation.

Mr Pennoyer says I voted against a law to tax national bank stock. At that time the democratic party had been contending for the right to tax U. S. bonds, greenbacks and national banks. The supreme court had decided that government securities could not be taxed by the states. I believed that the stock of national banks based upon deposit of U. S. bonds was not taxable. On that ground I voted against the bill.

But Mr Pennoyer brings a grave charge. He says that away back in 1856 I presided at a Know Nothing convention. I do not remember that the Know Nothings ever held conventions. I had always understood that they constituted a secret society and that they met only in secret. The convention to which Mr Pennoyer alludes was a convention of delegates representing this [illegible] district consisting of old whigs and [illegible] opposed to [illegible] democracy. Of course Mr [illegible] could not believe any man [illegible] then [illegible] would take any [illegible] against democracy.

I want to say a few words on the Chinese question. I made some remarks on this question in Portland which the newspapers seem to have got mixed up. I did not say I had never employed Chinamen. I have employed Chinamen—some years ago at one time to do a small piece of grubbing, at another to help take care of some onions. I employed all the white men and boys and Chinamen I could get and then lost the onions. I neither deny it nor apologize for it. It was a business matter. I have never employed Chinamen to the exclusion of white labor.

I have always contested the wisdom of the Burlingame treaty. I thought at the time the government had taken a grave responsibility in opening up this coast to free and unlimited Chinese immigration. Some years ago I became convinced that they were coming in numbers sufficient to constitute some danger to this coast. I believed that our citizens ought not to employ them when they could get along without. In that case they would gradually disappear. They don't come to stay and if they cannot get work will go home. For the last four or five years I have practiced what I preach. During that time I have employed white men exclusively from fifteen to forty at a time. Some of this labor as in grubbing could have been done much cheaper by Chinese. But so long as the Chinamen are here under treaty stipulation they are entitled to the full protection of the laws and we owe it to ourselves and to the honor of our state to see that they have such protection.

My competitor says he is in favor of the state building a railroad around the obstructions in the Columbia river. I do not find such a proposition endorsed by the democratic party in its platform. This doesn't sound like democratic doctrine. I do not believe such a measure advisable. The Columbia is the highway to more territory out of Oregon than in it and it is the duty of the federal government to make the necessary improvements. Should the state undertake it there would be danger of the national government delaying or neglecting its work. I do not believe that the territory in Eastern Oregon want a toll portage railroad. What they want and ought to have is an open free river.

My competitor says he has no record. Thirty years a resident of one place and no record. Fellow citizens is that complimentary to his energy, public spirit and intelligence? But he has a record. He began to make one a few months ago and I wouldn't take it for all the votes in the state of Oregon. He boasts of his presiding over the court house meeting as the proudest act of his life. He claims that he was a peace-maker between the business men of Portland and a dangerous rabble. Mind you I do not call these men a rabble but use the terms Mr Pennoyer is reported to have used in his speeches.

Fellow-citizens this claim is not well founded. I will tell you what preserved the peace in Portland. It was the vigilance of her law abiding citizens, the prompt action of the city and county authorities, the firmness and energy of Gov. Moody in placing the arms of your state in the hands of true men who were willing to revere and to enforce the law and who would keep their oaths that prevented lawlessness and brought peace to Portland. Has Mr Pennoyer no other way of showing his friendship for labor and the laboring men of this state than by endeavoring to identify the honest toilers of Oregon with the Albina and Oregon City and Portland agitators? Is presiding over what he has termed "a dangerous rabble" while they boycott public journals and business men his only friendly act for honest labor? What laboring men want is not agitation but employment at fair wages and judicious development and protection of our industries.

Mr Pennoyer attempts to raise the ghost of the bill to tax unnaturalized foreigners. That bill shared the same fate as the queue bill, and were both furnished by a democratic house. Will Mr Pennoyer affirm the principles of that bill?

But fellow citizens I have trespassed too long upon your time and must give place to other speakers. In conclusion I will say that if elected governor of this state I shall perform the duties of that office as intelligently as I can, and honestly, impartially and fearlessly.

OPEN LETTER No. 7

PORTLAND May 29

As the election will be on hand by the time that this paper reaches the remote counties of our state, I make to day this final appeal to the property owners, taxpayers and law abiding order loving voters of Oregon, and more especially of this county and particularly to those of them who are raising families. In so doing I desire to thank THE OREGONIAN for the favor it has shown me in throwing its columns open so liberally for my letters. And now I desire to say again to the voters of the class above specified that it is a matter of small consequence to me as an individual whether I may or may not be elected to the office of district attorney. My interests are all identified with yours and it is your duty and my desire that in selecting the men who are to represent us in the enforcement and execution of our laws you should vote for those who will do their duty in this respect, and if you believe that either of the other candidates for the office of district attorney will more faithfully discharge that duty than I would if elected you should vote for him and not for me. We are living in perilous times. Things are not moving as they formerly have done and I am much more solicitous for the protection of my boys from ruin, and the little property I own from destruction by either unlawful violence or legalized robbery in the shape of excessive and unnecessary taxation, than I am to hold office. In this connection I ask you to direct your attention to the following clipping from the Saturday Evening Times, a sheet which has just come to the birth in this city. It claims to put a soliloquy into the mouth of each candidate whose election it opposes and among them is the following:

I also have ascertained that he who rushes into print writes his own obituary. Here I have been writing to secure the votes of a certain class and upon investigation I find that they all drink. E C Bronaugh.

I suppose that this is intended as an allusion to my letter addressed to laboring men and farmers. I have written nothing under the supposition that I would secure the votes of the certain class referred to by that writer. The paper in which the above supposed soliloquy appears is edited I am told by a man who is now under indictment in the United States court for attempting a few weeks ago to incite riot and bloodshed in our midst, and the certain class mentioned by him are the men who then held the people of Portland in feverish excitement and caused them to rest uneasily at night while our police and soldiery guarded our homes and property at the peril of their lives. And they all drink. Does it not therefore begin to dawn upon the minds of voters who own homes, pay taxes and are raising families in this city or county, whether they favor prohibition or a high license liquor tax, that the 110 saloons kept in Portland are largely more than a hundred too many places standing open day and night and Sundays as well to ruin our boys and furnish to such men in any future riot they may seek to inaugurate the drink that shall fire their already maddened brains and hearts to deeds of desperation? Is it not time that we quit talking nonsense about whether the men who are to be entrusted with the enforcement and execution of our laws are democrats or republicans and pay more attention to the question whether they are capable men who will faithfully discharge their duty if elected? Is it not time that we as republicans and as democrats should in the selection of men to fill such positions unite our whole strength as property owners, taxpayers, law abiding citizens and heads of families for our mutual protection at the polls? I have heard that some good men are saying that they would vote for me if they felt assured that in so doing they would not be throwing their votes away. Is it possible for you to throw your vote away when casting it for the protection of yourselves, your sons, your daughters, your wives, your homes and your property in such a contest as this? Now vote for me or against me just as you please but I adjure you to cast your votes for your own self defense and to endeavor to elect to all offices the men who will most exert themselves to keep these evil forces in restraint or you will have cause to repent that you did not do so.

E C BRONAUGH

Rescued from Death

William J. Coughlin, of Somerville Mass says: In the fall of 1876 I was taken with BLEEDING OF LUNGS followed by a severe cough. I lost my appetite and flesh and was confined to my bed. In 1877 I was admitted to the Hospital. The doctors said I had a hole in my lung as big as a half dollar. At one time a report went around that I was dead. I gave up hope, but a friend told me of DR. WILLIAM HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS. I got a bottle, when, to my surprise, I commenced to feel better and to-day I feel better than for three years past.

COMMERCIAL.

SATURDAY, May 29

Light rain showers fell on Wednesday and on Thursday, since which time the weather has been fair and cloudy by turns. This last is more seasonable than the hot days preceding, which forced small fruits and fastened the chills upon many of us. Trade of a general character continues good, and the week witnessed more than the customary movement in produce. A new disposition to sell wheat and oats long held by first or second hands is the cause. Berries gradually grow more plentiful, and greatly cheapened values are promised with next week. Local cherries are only turning color.

Overland receipts include 3 bxs chairs, car wagons, 240 cs lard, car stoneware, car gas pipe, 37 cs boots and shoes, 16 cs 40 kgs syrup, 61 step ladders, 13 cs cotton piece goods, 28 sets wheels, 40 cs soap powder, 20 bxs salt meat, 10 cs cocoanuts, 25 cs sardines, 7 bbls pickles, 75 springs, 4 cs cigars, 100 bdls cocoa matting, 1 bbl 3 csks 10 ctes glassware, 3 [illegible] maple syrup.

PRODUCE RECEIPTS—Past 24 hours 2535 ctls wheat, 102 bbls flour, 1 11 ctls oats, 115 sks potatoes, [illegible] lbs wool, 246 lbs hides, 68 cs eggs, 4 cs butter, 61 hogs. Also 883 ctls wheat, 60 bbls flour, [illegible] lbs wool, 2788 lbs hides from the Eastern [illegible].

FREIGHTS—The [illegible] came under charter to Meyer, Wilson & Co. She is one of those named for salmon loading, being the second of that class now at hand. Unless there comes an improvement in the salmon run a part of the fleet intended for fish carriage will have to take wheat or flour, of which there is thought to be plenty in sight. Rates here for iron are quoted 30s [illegible] to 35s, the latter figure probably being in excess of the ideas of shippers. Tonnage taken before arrival for salmon loading secured 37s 6d and upwards.

WHEAT—Beerbohm quotes California off coast [illegible] over [illegible] figure more nearly conforms with recent private advices and bears out the statements made late in the week. It is quite impossible to [illegible] with any certain degree of [illegible] as yet. There is no need and believe that [illegible] will go to $1 10 for Walla Walla [illegible] expected to rule relatively higher [illegible] demands.

MILLSTUFFS—The [illegible] advance in bran and shorts is followed [illegible] make their prices strong [illegible] quite out of the market and but few [illegible] are offered.

OATS—Receipts still liberal yet mostly on old purchase account. At San Francisco there is every indication that prices will go lower. Even should offerings be reduced prices cannot soon gather. Here [illegible] is all that can be safely quoted.

POTATOES—There are now no scarcity reported [illegible] tons [illegible] take freely of new stock which all grocers handle.

EGGS—Light receipts for two days with strong talk of [illegible] advance Monday. Sold at 12½c to-day.

CHICKENS—Latest sales were at $3 50 to $3 50 for old. Large spring do [illegible] better.

WOOL—Some commission houses still quote up to 18c which is seemingly beyond the value of any wool coming. Buyers name 15@16c for fair to choice. It is certain that 15@16c covers the great bulk of transactions. Advices are of quiet market.
